Sodexo has mobilized over 65 new built rigs in the past 3 years, with dedicated teams located in Chinese, Korean and Singaporean shipyards.

We normally offer a complete mobilization process with delivery service to locations across the world. However given the significant number of jack-ups that go on dry tow, we have consequently adapted our mobilization services to fit such needs.

➤ BENEFITS FOR DRY TOW JACK-UPS

- Time Efficiency
 - > Upon delivery of the jack-up on location, the client is able to board and use the rig within 24 hours of offload. We are able to stock dry goods & drinks beforehand, and all that is needed would be the delivery of fresh produce and meat.
- Cost Savings
 - > No need to fly in crew from country of operations to prepare the rig. We have highly experienced crew who have worked with us on average for six years and are specialized in mobilization operations.
 - > Equipment procured directly from the manufacturer, avoiding middle agents who charge their own cut.

Jim Finlay, Rig Manager of Seadrill West Tucana said:

"We would not have been able to manage all aspects of the mobilization if it wasn't for Sodexo's participation. The team displayed professionalism and commitment while delivering their services on time and within budget."

PLANNING

All our services can be completed in a two week period, however we have experience using a night crew in doing it in as little as 5 days, for those projects on a tight deadline. We maintain a daily relationship with the rig manager so that any issues are brought up and addressed by the relevant parties on a continual basis.

Sample: A monthly QHSE report is also submitted including an audit section with recommendations for improvements.

DATE	OBSERVATIONS MAIN POINTS	TOTAL	STATUS	COMMENTS

Upon completion of our services, a handover report will be presented to the rig manager. This will help assist a smoother transition for the catering crew who will take over at the location of operation. In this report, we highlight problems which are pending to be solved and provide suggestions for improvements.
